

The engaging environment and brilliant resources at Ledbury Primary School have enriched James and Evan's educational journey

Andrew and Kim live in Ledbury with their children James, aged 10, and Evan, aged 5.

Enjoying school life

Both James and Evan have adapted well to school life at Ledbury and enjoy sharing their learning experiences with their parents. Andrew says: "They enjoy school life at Ledbury. They absorb lots of knowledge and information at school, then can't wait to share it with us at home. They have a fun learning experience every day."

A brand-new playground

Ledbury Primary School recently built a new playground to provide more opportunities for creative play, which both James and Evan have greatly enjoyed. Andrew shares: "They are very excited about the new playgrounds at school. The fantastic Key Stage 1 playground is such a nice and creative play area, with a new tree house, climbing equipment, and building toys to spark young children's curiosity. The Key Stage 2 playground offers much more space for our older child to enjoy the football, tennis, and games."

Extracurricular activities

The school offers a wide range of extracurricular activities and sporting events for children of all ages, which James and Evan both benefit from: "They love the extracurricular activities, such as forest school, residential trips, visits to Techniquet, museums and theatres. School carnival is the big event in summer, and they also invite people from zoos, churches, fire stations and more to help the children have a well-rounded education," explains Andrew.

James also takes part in the drama, hockey, and football clubs, while Evan has joined the dodgeball club.

A brilliant library

Ledbury's library boasts a wide selection of books, which has fostered a love of reading in both boys. Andrew says: "Ledbury has an amazing library. The library system encouraged our children to fall in love with reading. They provide access to a wider world of books, helping to increase children's knowledge and insight. We are very impressed with the categories and number of books in the school's library."

Nurturing teachers

Andrew notes that the teachers are incredibly supportive and work closely with the children to nurture their individual qualities: "The teachers are very responsible and approachable. They find and nurture the best qualities in each child while also encouraging and helping the children in the areas they need to improve."

Evan, who was initially shy when he started reception, has become much more confident with the support of his teachers. Andrew shares: "Evan was a very shy and quiet child when he joined reception. With the teacher's help, like mixing him with different children, encouraging him to put his hand up and joining different activities, he soon became much more confident and independent. He's settled very well."

Children say

James says: "The library is my favourite place at LPS."

Evan says: "I love my teachers and the new playground."
